Not illustrated. 1839 Excerpt: .of Scott, of Cooper, of Franklin, of Washington Irving, and of Story, are not only familiar to their men of letters, but, both in.reprints and translations, -are as widely-circulated there as at home. Germany has studied and appropriated the.works of antiquity and of her contemporaries, and still watches as narrowly and profits as much by the writings pf all the rest of Europe as though she depended upon them for her intellectual nutriment. And yet what literature has more native soul and independence? So the monarch of rivers flows.on, his wave swelled but-not changed, his tide deepened by the streams received on his course. Contrast the English labors with the German in the reciprocal cultivation of their literatures. When you have enumerated the translation of a few fugitive pieces by Scott, Coleridge aud Taylor, the list is nearly complete of what they have taken from the extensive stores of her polite letters. With her scientific produc- tions we are, I believe, more familiar, although we do not sufficiently apply to the language to avail ourselves of its treasures: The study of Biblical criticism is enriched by the works of Scholz, Eichhorn, Schleiermacher, Voland, Jabn, and Molitor, who has created a new era, not only in Biblical literature, but in the philosophy of history. Her classical scholars have finished and extended the researches of the Italian commentators. The most remarkable amongst them is Wolff, who has with great success advocated the claims of classical antiquity as a...
